This one's got that "don't overthink it... just come look" kind of pull. 2 bed, 2 bath sitting on 2.2 acres near Pomme de Terre Lake... which already checks a box that's getting harder and harder to find. But it's the feel that does the heavy lifting. Big open living, kitchen, dining setup where nobody's stuck in a corner... conversations carry, food gets passed around, and somehow the night goes longer than planned. The kind of space where a simple get-together turns into a full-blown "why don't we do this more often?" Step outside and it shifts gears. Plenty of room for yard games, kids running wild, dogs doing laps like they've got a job to do. Firepit nights, cold drinks, maybe a little too competitive at cornhole. Storage shed's there for the lake toys, mower, all the extras that come with actually using your place instead of just owning it. And the neighborhood? The kind where people wave. Not forced... just how it is. Inside, the master's got room to breathe... not cramped, not an afterthought. A place you actually want to land at the end of a long day on the water. This isn't trying to be flashy. It's just hard to find, easy to enjoy, and even easier to picture yourself in. And those ones don't sit around long.
